Fuse lit on fireworks ban in Minden Hills

By Mark Arike

Some new restrictions could be imposed on the use and sale of fireworks in the Township of Minden Hills.

During their Aug. 9 committee of the whole meeting, councillors shared their concerns, as well as concerns expressed by their constituents, over the noise and other disturbances caused by those setting off fireworks on a regular basis.

"I have received a number of phone calls, e-mails and letters... about the loud noise, fireworks and partying," said Ward 1 Councillor Brigitte Gall, who brought the issue forward at the meeting.

Gall, who lives in town, said she often hears fireworks going off and people shouting at one another.

A ratepayer who recently retired to the area with her husband contacted Gall to tell her about her encounter with a neighbour who had been keeping her up at night by setting off fireworks.

"They are continually being kept awake at night by the fireworks, firecrackers and the ensuing parties which happen," said Gall.

The woman once asked her neighbours to stop and they came out with a copy of the township's noise bylaw.

"They said there's nothing you can do about it."

Gall said the township's current noise bylaw is very limited.

"It does not define the parameters within which you can make noise, the hours you can make noise, what constitutes unfair or unreasonable noise," she said.

Other municipalities, said Gall, have clearly identified the restrictions in their noise bylaws. In Highlands East, persistent barking, whining, noises and fireworks, among other things, are prohibited.

"Dysart [et al] and Algonquin Highlands are very clear on the parameters around noise."

Gall proposed that council consider a bylaw which would prevent both the sale and discharge of fireworks outside of the permitted times of May 24, July 1, 4, and New Year's Eve.

Ward 2 Councillor Ken Redpath said fireworks are a "big, big problem" for lake residents. Redpath read two pieces of

Noise bylaw could govern use of fireworks

correspondence he received from frustrated property owners.

"Fireworks have no place in the Highlands and should be banned outright, except for use during Canada Day and Victoria Day celebrations," wrote one of the lake residents.

A seasonal resident of Minden for 24 years also wrote in to council.

"The widespread use of fireworks isn't reasonable nor is it appropriate," stated the resident, who addressed their concerns for the environment in the letter.

Redpath, a resident of Moore Lake for many years, said fireworks have become a growing trend over the last 10 to 15 years.

"This is a fairly new development," he said. "We used to have people who set off fireworks occasionally on the May 24 weekend..."

He partly attributed the rise in use of fireworks to businesses that keep them in stock.

"I think a lot of it has to do with more and more businesses selling them in town," said Redpath. "I recognize that perhaps it's a bit of an infringement on businesses if we stop them from selling them, but I don't think we should have businesses doing things that are detrimental to the well-being of the county or the people."

Redpath said he believes the township should take a step in the right direction and ban the sale and use of fireworks outside of certain holidays.

"I encourage us to be an example to other councils." Ward 3 Councillor Jean Neville also supported imposing a ban. Neville asked Gall about the enforcement of such a bylaw.

"When you consider we have over 600 lakes, it would be impossible to police that with any number of bylaw officers – you'd need a thousand of them," said Gall. "My understanding from other municipalities is that if you have that bylaw, at the very least you afford the people on those lakes or in town the opportunity to take the bylaw to the neighbour and say, 'there is a bylaw in place. Please respect the bylaw.'"

Gall said that as residents of the Highlands, "we have a very real responsibility to recognize our environment." She added that fireworks contain a lot of heavy metals.

Reeve Barb Reid, who sits on county council, said the fireworks ban has been discussed at their recent meetings.

"This should be a county-wide issue, in the same way that the tree-cutting bylaw is a county-wide initiative," said Reid, adding that the legalities around banning the sale of fireworks needs to be considered.

"I'm not sure we have the ability to do that."

Reid also said consideration needs to be given as to whether any provisions should be made to allow people to set off fireworks in designated areas.

"Do we make provisions for people to come to our fairgrounds to set off fireworks?" she asked. "Do we ban the activity or is it controlled?"

Council will discuss the matter further at their October committee of the whole meeting.

OPP Briefs

Citizens report impaired driver

The Haliburton Highlands detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) have charged Troy Middlebrooks with impaired driving, drive over 80 and dangerous driving thanks to a phone call from concerned citizens according to an OPP release.

On Aug. 10 at approximately 8:15 p.m., drivers on Highway 35 south of Minden called the police to report a possible impaired driver. Officers intercepted the vehicle on Highway 35 and Happy Hour Lane, at which time it was determined the driver, Middlebrooks, had been consuming alcohol.

The 44-year-old Gravenhurst man will appear at the Ontario Court of Justice in Minden on Sept. 5 to deal with the charges.

Huntsville man charged with over 80

Officers of the Haliburton Highlands detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) Marine Patrol, assisted by officers of the OPP's snowmobile, ATV and vessel enforcement unit (SAVE), have charged a Huntsville man with operating a vessel over 80 mgs.

On Aug. 4 at approximately 10:20 p.m. officers intercepted a vessel during a marine patrol on Raven Lake in the Township of Algonquin Highlands. It was determined the operator, Peter Hellinga, had been consuming alcohol.

Hellinga, 27, was also charged with operating a vessel with an open container of liquor. He will appear at the Ontario Court of Justice in Minden on Sept. 5.

Marine patrol charges vessel operator

A Stouffville man was charged with operating a vessel over 80 mgs and failure to have proof of competency on board a pleasure craft during a marine patrol on Gull Lake on Aug. 5.

Officers from the Haliburton Highlands detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) Marine unit and the OPP's snowmobile, ATV and vessel enforcement unit (SAVE) intercepted the vessel at approximately 8:20 p.m., where it was determined the operator, Neil Blanchet, had been consuming alcohol.

Blanchet, 33, will appear at the Ontario Court of Justice in Minden on Sept. 5 to answer these charges.

Festival fun

Everybody loves a good festival.

Lucky for us, these events have been in abundance across the Highlands over the past two months. We've had heritage festivals, agricultural festivals, word festivals, music festivals, art festivals and theatre festivals.

You would think after a while people would start to roll their eyes at the word 'festival', but that's not the case. What makes these events exciting is that no two are exactly alike. There may be common ground between them, but each one has its own hook to bring in visitors.

What makes a festival good is passion. I dare say you won't find a festival organizer or participant who isn't passionate about what they do. Otherwise, it would be a pretty dull event.

At the Wilberforce Agricultural Fair this past weekend, visitors were given the opportunity to try their hands at a number of crafts and trades, including traditional woodworking. Mark Bramham of Wilberforce stood there next to his lathe, chisel in hand, encouraging youngsters and adults to try shaping wood. The smile that crossed his face as kids laughed and wood chips flew was invigorating. There are likely few places in this world he would rather be than behind that lathe, if I had to guess.

During the Stanhope Heritage Day in July, Elinor Hamilton spent the day teaching visitors how to use a traditional loom. While it may have been frustrating at first, people had fun learning and Elinor had fun teaching.

Festivals give us the opportunity to share the things we love and the things that make us unique with the rest of the world. Whether it's shaping wood or words, making marmalade or blankets, quilting or cooking, these crafts and trades need to be shared and passed on, lest we lose them forever.

But festivals aren't just great for exhibitors who want to pass on their knowledge.

A reader recently speculated that I spend all my time in front of the TV at home. While this isn't entirely accurate, it's true of a lot of families. A community festival, however, is enough to get almost anyone off the couch. While they're there, the festival affords them the opportunity to discover something new.

While some people look at community festivals as unnecessary and wastes of time, I would suggest they are very necessary to the health of our communities. We have such a rich heritage here that is worth sharing. More than that, we have a responsibility to engage our families in activities and give them the chance to step out of their comfort zones and try something new. How else will they find a passion of their own if we don't first share ours?

So bring on the festivals, I say. Whatever your age, everyone has something to learn. I can't think of a better way to do it.

Yahoos

My grade seven science teacher, Mr. Store, kept a giant, sealed glass bottle on his desk. Inside were water, plants and a lone goldfish. It was an ongoing demonstration that with only light, a closed ecosystem will find the perfect balance between respiration and photosynthesis, plants and animals each releasing the gas required by the other. These contraptions were very popular in the 1970s.

Alas, one day the goldfish was found, unexpectedly, prematurely and quite surprisingly, dead. Mr. Store, scientist that he was, launched an investigation. He found that the pH of the water in the bottle had mysteriously dropped well into the acidic range, likely the cause of the deceased fish. He also found that the vinegar part of the vinegar and baking soda demonstration was missing. Putting two and two together he exclaimed to a bewildered class, "Some yahoo's been runnin' around puttin' vinegar in my ecology jug!"

Mr. Store had a very entertaining way with words.

He'd probably have a few choice ones for some of the goings on this summer. From Highlands East, we have reports of the fire chief's frustration at having to douse twice as many fires as normal in July, many caused by people ignoring the fire ban. It seems putting up signs saying TOTAL FIRE BAN all over the county doesn't quite get the point across to some folks. Equally disturbing was the news that vandals tore up a newly-paved road in Gooderham.

Over to Minden, where council is responding to residents frazzled by unscheduled and persistent fireworks. Fireworks used to be reserved for Victoria Day and Canada Day, but now it seems some people need to burn their money on a weekly basis. Noise and misbehaviour on the rail trail are other sources of discontent from those who live beside the corridor or use it for quiet activities like walking.

Back in Dysart, a letter-writer complains about erosion caused by wake boats driving too close to the shore, while at the county level a tree-cutting ban is being discussed to stop wanton clear-cutting of shorelines. Only Algonquin Highlands appears to have peace in the land, though surely someone has been peeved by loud music or unscrupulously early weed whacking.

What all of these transgressions have in common is a lack of courtesy and respect, both for other people and their property. There's nothing new about this kind of behaviour.

But there does seem to be a difference in terms of impact. Recreation is getting louder; many eschew canoes and kayaks for jet skis and motor boats — not necessarily a problem as long as the rules are followed and common sense applied, for example by slowing down close to shore and not doing donuts beside neighbours trying to swim. On land, motorized vehicles can tear up tracks and terrorize wildlife. Excessive speed can be dangerous to both riders and bystanders.

All of these annoyances multiply in the summer, and not just because of the quadrupling of the population. In the off-season, the Highlands is a sparsely-populated place. People know each other. Make too much of a nuisance of yourself and you might get a reputation, possibly even a what-for next time you're in the hardware store.

But in summer, it's easier to maintain anonymity; it's also easier to overestimate your rights. Social experiments confirm that people are much more likely to be discourteous or disrespectful to people they don't know. Familiarity may breed contempt, but it also engenders a certain mutual understanding that what I may do to annoy you today, you may do to me tomorrow. Somebody reversed that sentiment and turned it into a snappy phrase a long time ago: do unto others...

By no means am I saying that cottagers, or any particular group, are lawless or lacking in courtesy. As is usually the case, just a few people create most of the problems, spoiling things for everyone else. A bunch of yahoos, if you will, and they come in all types, from all walks of life.

Being courteous doesn't have to spoil or even limit your fun. All it requires is a bit of thinking, consideration. I'll never understand why some people just don't get that.

If you're wondering about the goldfish, it was not me. I had learned my lesson after putting a stink bomb in somebody's locker. Today they would call in the Haz-Mat people and send me off to Guantanamo for questioning. But back then the only "emergency response" was to send some poor janitor in search of the offending odour. He couldn't find it. I felt so guilty I stayed after school and tried to recover it myself, only to forget exactly where I had put it. Eventually I hit the right locker, and my brief career as a yahoo ended without ever making much of a stink.

School knapsacks for less fortunate

Dear editor,

I read Bram Lebo's column regarding the creation of school knapsacks for the less fortunate youth in our community. His entire article irked me, but the most unintelligible part of his statement was clearly "the high profile of the donors and low profile of the recipients is disturbing, particularly when they are so nearby to one another."

Most kids who are in low-income families know they are poor. They know their parents struggle, but they don't know all of the networking and sacrificing that goes into making sure they have what they need. They don't realize they eat from food banks, the best-before bin or because neighbours and friends have a bit extra. They don't realize what they don't have because their parents have the courage and stamina to do whatever it takes.

My children have been the recipients of one of those knapsacks. They have been grateful to have school supplies on the first day of school like their peers. I have been grateful for the program that placed those supplies in their hands. They (my kids) don't need to know everything. They know they are loved and Lord willing we get by during rough times.

The Outsider — It's all in the Games

By Will Jones

Just before the Olympic Games began I wrote a missive decrying the multitude of shenanigans surrounding the event. Put simply, I moaned about it.

On reflection and after watching as much of the Games as I could between the barrage of adverts, promotional messages and tedious features on CTV about 'Game Changers', I find that corporate sponsorship and traffic congestion aside, I really enjoyed the Olympics.

However, what watching this plethora of inspirational international jousting from my living room in rural Haliburton did for me was make me realize just how un-Canadian I still am. I yearned for sight of the British athletes, even a glimpse would have done, but unless they triumphed in an event in which a Canadian also stepped onto the podium there was little chance of that. I looked forward to watching British domination in cycling and sailing, but the channels on my TV seemed stuck on rowing thanks to Canadian participation, or, strangely I thought, anything with Americans in it. This puzzled me for a while but then I got it. You folks want to see the Americans fail just as much as the British do. You'll sit through countless events and medal ceremonies where stern-faced, grey track-suited specimens of ultimate sporting prowess salute the Stars and Stripes just to catch that upset when, say, three jubilant Jamaicans sweep the medals in the men's 200-metres or when a South African swimmer doesn't read the script and beats Michael Phelps to what was supposed to be his umpteenth gold. Yeah, I enjoyed those moments too. They made me feel closer to Canadians again, even in the midst of the dearth of coverage of the host nation's athletes.

And you know what else brought me closer to Canadians? Watching and listening to the incessant whining of both player and spectators after the Canadian women's soccer team's loss to the Americans.

"It's not fair. We were robbed. The referees were biased. Blah blah blah..." Face it folks, the Canadian goalkeeper broke the rules. She held onto the ball for too long. She was wasting time and she got caught. I don't care that this particular rule isn't often upheld and I don't care that the subsequent free kick produced a penalty decision that was marginal. The goalie broke the rules and she was punished for it. Stop your whining.

Actually, don't stop your whining because it reminds me so much of being back in Blighty, listening to my friends and colleagues week in week out as they whinged and whined about some terrible decision the ref made. The outpouring of scorn against this Olympic referee, the barrage of moaning about a decision being unfair to the losing side, gave me a warm glow inside. It almost brought a tear to my eye as I remembered days past spent listening to English friends (often

Large wakes damage shorelines

Dear editor,

- Through wildly fluctuating lake levels of several feet, the Trent Severn Waterway is the sole instigator directly responsible for erosion in and around the waterways of the Highlands.

- Waves produced by naturally occurring winds have been enhanced by damaging waves created motorized pleasure craft. As a result, the rate of man-made erosion has increased exponentially.

- A more recent and far more threatening invasive enemy is threatening our lakes and rivers. And I'm not referring to Zebra Muscles and the blood-thirsty Lamprey of the Great Lakes.

- Watercraft for the pleasures of wakeboarding and water-skiing are targeting our shorelines – and acreage – at the expense of waterfront property owners. These "Escalades of the Water" are specifically designed to create larger and more powerful wakes. The result is a series of tsunami-like waves that repeatedly pummel our innocent sandy shorelines.

- I have witnessed such waves impact the shoreline on numerous occasions and crash against a small boat sandwiched between them and a shoreline dock. The boat with a 9.9-horsepower motor swung like a pendulum out of control.

- Are the vast majority of boat owners still unaware or not respectful of the near-shoreline speed limit imposed by the federal government?

- It appears all-but-certain that operators of wakeboard and water-skiing watercraft are unaware they are responsible for damages occurring as a result of their wake.

- Why is the Trent Severn Waterway allowed to mimic such rogue behaviour?

over a pint or two in the local boozer) lambast the referee and moan, if only he hadn't done this or had done that, 'we would have won!'

But, putting moaning aside along with my nationalistic allegiances, I cheered for a certain young trampolinist who wowed the world and won Canada gold. I commiserated with Canada's female wrestlers who came so near to their dreams only to be pushed, thrown and barged from them. I gawked at the speed of kayakers, their arms whirling like clockwork toys and I grinned almost as much while watching the young Canadian sprinter as he did himself when he lined up against Usain Bolt in a semi-final sprint.

The Olympics in London have illustrated to me that I still have a strong connection with my country of birth: a national pride that I guess I'll never lose even living in this wonderful land called Canada. And the successful staging of the Olympics in the city I used to call home brought out a glow of pride that I could not have predicted in the weeks running up to the event.

Go England. Go Canada. Go everyone. Faster Higher Stronger... but with a few less sponsors messages next time, please.

I do not like it. Why would you ban fireworks? But a forced ban except on special holidays is understandable.

I am for it. If it is a problem with people setting off fireworks at inappropriate times then it should only be May 24 and July 1.

I do not think that it is absolutely necessary. People get a lot of joy from fireworks as long as they stop by 11:00 p.m.

Fowler Construction Company has been awarded the contract to re-pave Highland Street in Haliburton.

At a special meeting on Aug. 7, Dysart et al council accepted the tender for $971,843.30 excluding HST from the locally-based firm; a bid that was over $80,000 lower than the next of three other bids tendered for the work.

"Fowler's was the lowest bid and I recommend that it is accepted by the council," said Brian Nicholson, director of public works. "The firm worked well with us on the York Street project and will be ready to start on Highland Street by Sept. 4."

Nicholson explained that following preconstruction meetings, the first few days of the work schedule would be taken up with mobilization operations – ensuring traffic flow equipment was installed – after which work proper would start on the street.

Streetscape works are scheduled to run until Oct. 31, however Nicholson is anticipating they will take longer.

"There's no way," he said. "This is construction. There will be disruption no matter how we try to minimize it. We'll do our best but there will always be unforeseen challenges, not least the weather, but we hope that shoppers and businesses will understand and work with us throughout the construction period to try to make the streetscape improvements as painless as possible for everyone."

Robert Rotenberg reads from his current hit novel, 'Stray Bullets', almost entirely written in the Heritage House Cafe.

Rotenberg brings it home

By Douglas Pugh

While Robert Rotenberg in one of his 'lives' is a criminal lawyer in Toronto, the other side of his life – heavily based in Haliburton – is rapidly gaining ground and more of the media spotlight.

Writing a series of books that are quickly gaining international sales and recognition, the author is shooting up the best-seller lists across Europe, having now been translated into nine different languages. One of his big advantages is Haliburton.

"I have been coming up here to this area since I was a small boy at Camp White Pine," says Rotenberg. "It's a very big part of me, this place."

One of his inspirations to write was a tutor at Camp White Pine, a lady that he knew as 'Peggy Nature'. In later life he discovered that 'Peggy Nature' was, in fact, Margaret Atwood.

Rotenberg was giving selected readings not only from his latest book 'Stray Bullets' – most of which was actually written in the Heritage House Cafe itself – but from his previous novels and even the first draft of his next book. Knowledgeable and articulate, Rotenberg answered questions on scenes from any of his books and writing in general.

Rotenberg thanked not only the Heritage House cafe for hosting the event, but also Masters Bookstore for promoting the reading so well.

Rotenberg was a little cagey when asked whether any of his books would make the transition to television or the big screen.

"I can't say anything right now," he smiled, "but I'm hoping to make a very positive announcement in the next few weeks."

Haliburton County's Hot Reads

The following are the top five fiction and non-fiction titles as requested this week at the Haliburton County Public Library.

HCPL's TOP FIVE FICTION

1. Fifty Shades of Grey by E.L. James
2. Stray Bullets by Robert Rotenberg
3. The Third Gate by Lincoln Child
4. The 11th Hour by James Patterson
5. Gone Girl by Gillian Flynn

HCPL's TOP FIVE NON-FICTION

1. Wild: From Lost to Found on the Pacific Crest Trail by Cheryl Strayed
2. Wheat Belly: Lose the Wheat, Lose the Weight, and Find Your Path Back to Health by William Davis
3. Quiet: The Power of Introverts in a World That Won't Stop Talking by Susan Cain
4. Thinking Fast and Slow by Daniel Kahneman
5. The Wealthy Barber Returns by David Chilton

It is interesting to note that the Haliburton County Public Library has books that are currently soaring in popularity in spite of their not having even been released yet. Our system allows patrons to place holds on titles as soon as they have been ordered by our vendor. This means that individuals eagerly anticipating the upcoming release of their favourite popular authors can jump into the queue well in advance of the publishing date.

Here are some of these titles that you can bet will be on the HCPL top five most popular list in the coming months: Watching the Dark by Peter Robinson, Trust Your Eyes by Linwood Barclay, The Beautiful Mystery by Louise Penny, The Black Box by Michael Connolly and A Wanted Man by Lee Child. With these titles on the way, it looks like it will be a great autumn for mystery thriller readers. Place your holds today.

Faculty art auction raises $18,000

By Mark Arike

Buyer's were encouraged to bid high and bid often – and that's exactly what they did.

As a result of their generosity, over $18,000 was raised at this year's Haliburton School of the Arts (HSTA) faculty art auction on Aug. 9 for student scholarships and bursaries.

Over 119 pieces of art sold through a silent and live auction during the evening event held at the Haliburton campus. Bidders were led through the live auction by auctioneer Jim Nelson and his assistant Kent Farndale.

"The $18,000 raised this year will greatly assist our students pursuing a post-secondary arts education this upcoming year," said Sandra Dupret, principal of HSTA, in a press release. "As always, the auction represents the amazing support from our community and faculty."

Dupret thanked the faculty for their artistic contributions, the Haliburton Friends Network and event co-chairs Ted Brandon and Barbara Joy Peel.

Agnes Jamieson Gallery exhibition a 'must see' event

By George Farrell

There was a bit of a love-in at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery (AJG) on the afternoon of July 20, as approximately 60 people showed up at the official opening of 'Pro Tempore,' an exhibition of art by Rod Prouse.

In 'Pro Tempore' AJG curator Laurie Carmount has mounted a show that succinctly shows us what Prouse has accomplished to date in his career. Prouse's work is multi-faceted; impressionistic landscapes on big canvases, painted wooden blocks, airy and colourful gouaches of the Canadian National Exhibition, sketches, as well as underwater sculpture and video.

"I have for most of my career involved landscape as subject in a variety of formats; photo-based work, video, printmaking and painting," Prouse recently wrote in an artist statement. "The focus of my newest work is still the language of landscape but instead of looking to convention I am dipping into my personal evolution and involving printmaking, psychedelia, and digital imaging."

Born in 1945, Prouse was influenced by 60s psychedelia, as is apparent in 'Buckslide,' a riot of palette brushstrokes in blues, whites, greens and black, which so creatively captures the movement of the waterfall.

His appreciation of digital imaging is evident in works such as 'Sunset, Georgian Bay', and by the moody, evocative and romantic acrylics like 'Tyson Lake' and 'Severn', which depict watery reflections.

The influence of printmaking, an art passed down to Prouse from his father, is evident in 'Chihuahua,' a screen print, and 'Honeymoon Bay,' a block print.

Not satisfied with the conventional methods of block printing, where the block is inked and pressed on to paper to secure the image, Prouse took the process in a different direction.

"I moved from traditional block print media to engraving and then painting the wood itself with oils and acrylics," he explained.

The results are spectacular as 'Belize Carving' and 'Boy with Barracuda' attest. They are both 'primitive abstracts' that take full advantage of tropical imagery. Prouse travels quite a bit and his exotic pieces serve as a nice counterpoint to the Canadian landscapes in the show. There are two landscapes in particular, 'Algonquin Falls' and 'Goblin Bay' which, even though they are painted wood engravings, show a more traditional, painterly approach to the Canadian outdoors.

Comparing these two pieces to 'Redstone Lake', an oil painting by his father, (which is also part of the show), poignantly shows the influence of the elder Prouse.

"We started coming up to Devil's Lake and Redstone Lake, when I was young," Prouse said. "We'd take long canoe trips and I really got to know the countryside. Dad was a classically trained artist and all our holidays were based on fishing and painting."

Prouse, who spends a lot of his time teaching, some of it at the Haliburton School of the Arts, delivered his short talk to the audience at the AJG.

"For me the three most important elements of art are the artist, the subject and the audience. You make me feel inclusive and realize that it's not just about me, it's about the world."

'Pro Tempore' is showing at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery in Minden until Sept. 1.

Pastel artist Dalibor Dejanovic visited Highlands East for the plein-air festival.

Plein-air festival draws artists

By Matthew Desrosiers

They came from across the province, some as far as Quebec, to capture the Highlands East landscape.

From Aug. 2 to 5, artists descended on the Highlands with brushes, pencils, paints and pastels in hand to take part in the 4th annual 'A Brush with the Highlands' plein-air festival, hosted by the Highlands East Cultural Centre.

"Every year we get bigger and better," said festival organizer Tracey Green. "This year, we had 44 artists register. They come from all parts."

Plein-air is the art of painting your subject live and outdoors. Ten sites were available for painting during the festival, scattered throughout Highlands East.

Green said there are many plein-air painters around, they just need something to bring them together. And Highlands East is the perfect place to do that.

"There are lots of places in Haliburton County that would be lovely to paint, but the artists can actually travel here for three days, they get very little traffic, they're unencumbered, [and it's] very free and raw," she said. "I think that helps promote the overall atmosphere of the festival as well."

Toronto artist Dalibor Dejanovic is well-known for his plein-air work with pastels. This was his first time at the Highlands East festival.

"I love it," he said. "It's great country. It's really nice."

Dejanovic said the festival is a great way to get out and meet fellow artists.

"One thing as a painter, you're always kind of lonely," he said. "You don't really get to hang out with other people, so this has been good to see people and interact with them... talk about art and paint together."

Unfortunately, Dejanovic said there aren't many such festivals or competitions for plein-air artists around. However, this festival has been his favourite to date.

"For me, it's the best plein-air festival because it's the whole weekend," he said. "It draws lots of artists together. It's camping as well, you get to be in nature and it gets me out of the city."

The highlight of the festival is the last day, when all the artists bring their art together, he said.

"What's exciting is... coming in and seeing everyone's work," he said. "Seeing people painting the same spot you painted but with a completely different take on it [is] very inspiring."

While plein-air is not a widely recognized form of art anymore, Green said it still has great social and historical value.

"Historically, looking at this 500 years from now, wow, we're going to see Highlands East through the eyes of 50 different people," she said. "We're going to see it recorded, see it change and grow."

"I think that's just amazing."

Mobile Beer Store granted one-year permit

By Mark Arike

Come next summer, visitors and residents to Minden will likely find a mobile beer store in the parking lot of Dollo's Foodland.

In a special meeting following their Aug. 9 committee of the whole meeting, Minden Hills councillors passed a resolution granting The Beer Store in Minden a temporary use permit for a period of one year for a mobile beer store. In the original request, the applicant asked for a temporary use permit for a period of up to three years. The matter was discussed in the public portion of the meeting, where some concerns arose.

"We've been approached by the Foodland people and they have been approached by The Beer Store to set up a temporary beer store and mobile trailer," said Reeve Barb Reid.

"It would be staffed by the Minden Beer Store and it would be a second outlet for the summer."

Reid said the business venture requires a temporary use permit because setting up an additional retail outlet – mobile or otherwise – is not permitted within the current bylaw.

Ward 1 Councillor Brigitte Gall asked if the operation would run on full-time hours.

"That's a decision with The Beer Store and Dollo's Foodland," answered Reid. "I think the hours of operation for The Beer Store are provincially mandated and so I can't see the hours of operation for this being different."

Gall expressed concern over the precedent granting the temporary access could set.

"This then opens the door to other temporary facilities... such as a temporary LCBO, that could then lead to a drive-through CIBC..." said Gall. "As that continues to expand, my concern is that we'll facilitate only those people who are passing through the community and not the community itself."

She referred to the downtown core, and businesses and attractions that could suffer if visitors find more shopping opportunities on the outskirts of town.

"I would not like to see that Highway 35 corridor become the sole reason that people come through here."

Deputy Reeve Cheryl Murdoch shared Gall's concerns over losing traffic from the downtown core. She asked whether or not the temporary use permit would indicate dates that the business could operate.

"My understanding is that The Beer Store is only interested in doing this during the peak season, which is the summer," said Reid.

Ward 3 Councillor Jean Neville was concerned about the logistics of having the mobile business in Dollo's parking lot.

"I find that the Dollo parking lot... is horrendous to get in and out of with your car," said Neville. "I'm concerned there's not enough parking there to facilitate another retail outlet."

Despite her concerns, Neville was glad to learn the applicant was The Beer Store.

Councillor-at-Large Larry Clarke said he understood the concerns expressed by his fellow councillors. However, he saw this as a worthwhile opportunity.

"I think it will attract more people and more volume to the community, even though it's off the main course," said Clarke. "I would not like to see this council cause difficulty... for an opportunity to bring additional business and revenue in [to the community]."

Ward 2 Councillor Ken Redpath also voiced concerns about taking people away from the downtown area.

"This could be the start of a slippery slope," said Redpath. "I'm not sure it's what we want to do as a municipality."

Reid called it a private sector opportunity for the two businesses.

"I'm not sure it's a matter of convenience," she said. "It's really a commercial opportunity for The Beer Store and Foodland."

Reid suggested the possibility of giving the applicants a trial period of one year.

"That would allow them to test that theory and in the summer of 2013 they would need to apply to extend or renew the permit."

Neville said it would be helpful to hear from someone at The Beer Store before making a decision. Reid answered, stating that council should not be afraid to make a decision.

"I would hope we don't refrain from making decisions because we're afraid of something that might happen," she said.

Council discussed the matter further after their regular meeting and voted in favour of a one-year permit.

Stand without pain

Dear Penny,

I recently took a job as a cashier three days a week and I stand behind a counter for hours at a time. I like the job but my feet start to hurt after a couple of hours of standing and get worse as the hours roll on. It's a very hard floor and there's nothing I can do about that. So what can I do?

Footsore

Dear Footsore,

Standing in one position for extended periods is harder on the feet than walking long distances. Standing on a hard floor makes it even worse.

When you are compelled to stand for long periods of time, the best way to help your feet is to give them a softer spot to stand on.

Even if you can't change the floor, you may be able to soften the surface beneath your feet and I can suggest a few things to try.

First, a rubber mat on the floor behind the counter would provide a more resilient surface for you to stand on. I'm talking about the kind of spongy mat designed to use in front of a kitchen sink. They are non-skid and soft enough to provide a bit of the cushioning that will make standing for long periods more tolerable.

You might also ask if keeping a high stool close by to sit on for short periods would be acceptable. Getting off your feet for a few minutes every hour may be all you need to relieve the constant pressure and resultant pain.

The next and most important thing to do is to choose appropriate shoes. Forget the heels, wedges and cute sandals.

Choose athletic shoes with a soft rubber or crepe sole. Ordinary running shoes are better than anything with a hard sole. Cross trainers and walking shoes are better still. The goal is to wear the stoniest shoe you can find.

Also be sure the shoes you choose have a big toe box. The toe box is the front of the shoe which you want to be roomy enough so you can wiggle your toes comfortably.

If your shoes are big enough, a gel insole is also worth trying. But do be sure the insoles don't make your shoes so tight they cause friction and you add blisters or calluses to your foot problems.

And finally, many people find that an anti-inflammatory such as Alleve is an excellent way to reduce the pain of a stressful activity when taken in advance of the activity. Ask your doctor if it would be safe and smart for you to take that kind of remedy before you leave for work.

Readers, if you have any other questions—about your mobility, your comfort, or just about getting through your day more safely and easily, I want to hear them. For real-life answers you can use, write to Penny at penny@haliburtonhighlander.ca.

Cottage Vignettes

Things that go THUMP! in the night

By Barbara Szita-Knight, Toronto & Esson Lake

It is always a pleasure having relatives visit the cottage, but this weekend was special. Grandma and Grandpa were coming!

Grandma loves our cottage, although she's a little squeamish about mice and other cottage dwellers.

We had a full cottage, with Mom, Dad, Grandma, Grandpa, two kids and two cats. Tired from driving, we trundled off to bed for a perfect night of slumber, even the cats sleep better up here – but not this night.

As I lay in bed, I could hear snoring coming from the next room. And then a new sound: tap tap... THUMP, tap tap... THUMP. What in the world? Those cats were up to something.

It was time to investigate. Heaven forbid the rest of the cottage inhabitants should wake. I dutifully rolled out of bed, approached the doorway and gazed into the living room. I could see two cats sitting very alert, staring towards me but not at me... rather above and behind me. What, pray tell, was behind me?

With great trepidation, I turned, ever so slowly, and looked up. There on at the ceiling, poised in the corner, was a humongous black beetle, or so I thought. Not sure, I ventured a closer look.

"That's a bat!" I yelled in my head. The next action I took was one any brave female would take... I woke my husband. "What? Huh?" he mumbled.

"Don't get too excited but I think we are under siege from a bat," I whispered.

With great reluctance, he agreed to examine the critter.

"Yup, that's a bat," he moaned. "One very exhausted bat I might add."

We figured the cats had been trying to catch it midair... poor thing.

Creativity is never in short supply at the cottage. Knowing we needed to rescue this flying creature, we searched for a suitable containment option and found an empty margarine tub.

My hubby crept towards the bat. Slowly, he lifted it towards the ceiling and the bat just flopped in.

"Anything is better than those cats," it was probably whimpering to itself.

Sensing a duo of drooling felines, we knew chaos would erupt if the bat escaped from the container.

What now? The door to freedom was over 22 feet away with hurdles in the form of exposed ceiling beams blocking our path. Keeping the margarine tub against the ceiling my hubby slowly dragged it along towards the exterior door. Reaching the first beam, he angled the container against the beam, followed it down, around and back up, making sure the bat was still trapped. The closer to the door, the more frantic the cats became. They were clearly unhappy their plaything was getting away.

Finally we reached the door. The bat gratefully flew out like a bat out of, well, a cottage!

And despite the ordeal, Grandma had the best sleep ever.

HIGHLANDS OPERA THEATRE
The Tragedy of Carmen

Peter Brook, one of the greatest theatre directors of the 20th century, adapted Bizet's most popular opera and depicts a more intense and immediate tale of the doomed Carmen. The Tragedy distills the action of Carmen to its dramatic essence, focusing the story on the psychological motivations of the opera's principal characters. By peeling away layers of spectacle, Brook and his collaborators created a single, uninterrupted dramatic arc that builds inexorably to its tragic conclusion. The elements of this tragedy will be familiar to audiences from Bizet's original opera, but here they are given a new dramatic context that makes even the most familiar arias and duets -- some of the most famous music in all of opera -- surprising and fresh. The three performances will be held with English surtitles at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion in Haliburton Village, on August 17 and 21 at 8 p.m. and August 19 at 2 p.m.

Tickets are $25.

The Magic Flute

Music by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart

When a prince wanders into a strange land, he is asked by the grief-stricken queen to rescue her daughter, Pamina, who has been imprisoned by the tyrant, Sarastro. To aid the prince in his search, she gives him a magic flute and sends along the comical bird man, Papageno. Throughout the fantastical journey, there are serpents to slay, animals to tame, and trials by fire and water. The genius of Mozart shines brightly in this masterfully diverse mix of popular tunes and show-stopping coloratura display. One of the most imaginative works of art ever created, The Magic Flute blends myth, magic and an extraordinary variety of wonderful music to deliver the life-affirming message that love conquers all. Three performances only, with English surtitles, on Sunday, August 26 at 2 p.m., Tuesday, August 28 at 8 p.m. and Thursday, August 30 at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $30.

Let's get to it!

All successful projects begin with a thoughtful approach that addresses needs, alternatives and solutions. Important too is the need to be flexible, opportunistic and innovative along the way. Unlike house construction where precision is key, landscape projects will undoubtedly be shaped by the environment. Remember, the master plan that you have either on paper or in your head may not be an exact blueprint but rather a guideline. New ideas arise or unforeseen objects appear from the 'dark side' to force changes. But this can be a good thing if you remain somewhat faithful to the original idea. If a large Yoda-sized boulder resides in your proposed patio space, then why not make it a feature? Dig around, wash it off, put in some native plants, harvest some lichen and mosses and you did it. Easily said, right?

But what are some of the important considerations that will serve you best when moving through the construction stage? How do we shape the image in our heads into a reality that is both aesthetic and functional? Here are some tools or guidelines to help.

The Power of Three

Three is a magical number in the landscape, so we can use it a lot. Being an odd number, it suggests informality which is what we are trying to achieve. Groupings of three should have staggered spacing and not be in a line or other rigid geometric shape. And, best of all, we can repeat this concept with all elements such as shrubs, trees, rocks, decorative pots and planters.

For larger grouping such as ground cover or perennials, the same principle applies. Use odd numbers and stagger the spacing. The informal approach to planting has a distinct advantage over formal arrangements. When plants do not do well or grow at varying rates the differences can be a positive attribute to the overall natural scheme. Often in my own consulting work, I group varying sizes of the same plant to achieve this very effect.

By Terry Twine

Bold Is Beautiful
When viewing a landscape or any other 'picture', your eye seeks out points of interest upon which to focus. Provide that focal point by being bold. Rather than plant five shrubs of different sizes, shapes and species, make a bold statement by planting a strong grouping of one kind. Plant them close together for a massing effect and when you stand back to look you will notice that your eye is drawn to the grouping because it makes a statement. For smaller plants such as ground cover, grasses and ferns use large numbers again, at least 15. These mass plantings will often be the 'setting' for a specimen plant or garden feature. You want the setting to be muted so the specimen is the focus.

Continuity and Repetition

Don't be afraid to repeat yourself when selecting plant material, wood structures, patio stones or other elements. It is okay to use the same shrub in different areas, in strong groupings for effect. Similarly, when selecting 'specimen' plants, i.e., those of prime importance, place them in three different areas as a cohesive element. When the eye recognizes the continuity imparted by these familiar objects placed with care and thought, it sends a message to the brain; 'This feels right, I am comfortable here'. Likewise, wood elements should show common characteristics of mass, colour, design intent and 'feel'. A rear yard wood pergola should reflect some commonalities with a front gate, fence or entrance arbour.

Next time we will continue with more tools that will give your project life, vitality and hopefully your personal 'signature'.

A tough mudder in the making

By Mark Arike

Pushing himself to the limit is nothing unusual for local resident Gustavo Rojas. But for Rojas and two Minden residents, an extreme challenge is about to come their way.

The soon-to-be 29-year-old, who works in construction and stays active whenever he can, is about to become a 'Tough Mudder'. On Aug. 18, Rojas and his five teammates will join approximately 15,000 participants entering the Tough Mudder event at Mount St. Louis Moonstone Ski Resort in Oro-Medonte.

"I'm very excited," said Rojas. "I can't wait, I dream about it."

The two-day event will feature a 12-mile endurance challenge that is "the ultimate test of strength, grit, stamina and camaraderie," according to a press release.

Created by British Special Forces, Tough Mudder features 20 military-style obstacles. On the course, participants subject their bodies to flames, ice-cold water and electroshock therapy (just to name a few of the daunting challenges).

It's so difficult that not everyone completes it. Statistics show that on average, only 78 per cent of participants finish a Tough Mudder event. But numbers like that haven't scared off Rojas or his team.

"We all work very hard... so I think we should all be okay, not just physically but mentally," he said.

Rojas first heard about the event last January through a friend who thought it would be right up his alley.

"As soon as I saw the site I signed up," he said. "I put it all over Facebook to see if somebody wanted to join."

The June Tough Mudder press release states the event isn't about finish times or winning a medal. "With a course designed to be impossible to complete individually, 80 per cent of participants register with a team."

A few people expressed their interest but many were concerned about the level of commitment involved. Two of Rojas's friends, Mckye Shaw and Kieran Gillooly, eventually accepted the challenge. Joining them will be two male participants from Toronto (both known to Rojas) and an unknown female who signed up online.

Since the event will be extremely physically demanding, Rojas and the group have been training for the past several months.

"They've been training hard. They've all been running. One of the guys works for a tree company, so he starts running with tree trunks. He's also doing a lot of pull-ups and push-ups."

In the spring, the handy Rojas built and erected a few pieces of equipment in his backyard to get himself ready.

"I decided to make my own monkey bars. It's on a 30-degree angle and they're [the bars] about two feet apart, which makes it hard and good for training."

Rojas admits that he hasn't had much time for training during the last couple of weeks; however, he feels ready based on what he has done.

"I go running on the highway with weights on my legs and a four-by-four on my shoulders just to get endurance. I run for 15 k if not more."

When he was younger and living in Chile, Rojas tried out and was accepted into the military. While he didn't end up going through with it, he feels as if Tough Mudder will give him a taste of what he missed.

"I've always wanted to do something like this. So I'm just excited to be in it and do it."

To ensure they are physically up to the challenge, participants must complete a physical check with their doctor. They also have to sign a waiver in the event of their death.

"The tests you're doing there [at Tough Mudder] are very hard. You're going through 10,000-volt wires hanging down, mud, freezing cold water..."

For Rojas and his team, it's not about coming first, second or third that matters; it's about the experience they're going to get.

"If I wanted to compete for [prizes], I would do it myself. But it's more fun if you put in a team and you all help each other. It's like being in the army."

By signing up and paying an entry fee, the team will also be contributing to Wounded Warriors of Canada, an independent not-for-profit charity that supports Canadian soldiers wounded overseas.

In Tough Mudder events across the United States, participants have raised more than $3 million in support of the Wounded Warrior Project – a similar organization that supports wounded American soldiers and their families.

Rojas and his team are eager to bolt out of the starting line, but they have one big fear: the electroshock therapy obstacle.

"Our biggest fear is the electric shock right at the end," he said. "We've watched videos and some of the guys are getting shocked and just falling into the mud, over and over again."

As they cross the finish line, participants are given a glass of beer. Ironically, Rojas isn't much of a drinker.

"I don't know [if I'll drink it]," he laughed. "But the guys are all pretty excited about that."

Family and friends will be coming out to support their team – known as "Team Fearless" – but more local fans would be welcomed.

Thermo Seal

Thermo Seal Insulation Systems introduced the Blow-in-Blanket System (BIBS) to Ontario over twenty years ago. This advanced technology creates a seamless blanket of insulation for your building envelope while achieving greater R values than standard insulation. BIBS is installed by attaching a mesh fibre to framing members and blowing virgin fibreglass through a hose into each cavity. The BIBS system eliminates all void areas and air infiltrations commonly found with traditional fibreglass batt insulation by filling the entire cavity with three times the density (weight) of a standard batt.

With over twenty years of knowledge in service excellence, we guarantee your satisfaction with not only our insulation, but also our dedicated staff.

"Thermo Seal was on schedule (actually they were early), the crew was very cooperative and finished the project on time. I am impressed with the BIBS system and how it sealed to the wall. We will continue to recommend the product to our clients and use it on projects."

Rob Riel, Timberline Custom Homes

We are a full service insulator, installing BIBS, Polyurethane "Eco" Foam, insulation removal and fireproofing. While we believe that BIBS is a complete insulation system that helps you meet new building code requirements for increased R values, there are some circumstances where spray foam is an excellent alternative. For all your insulation needs, call the experts for a free estimate today. Keith Jennings 705-457-7446 or visit thermosealinsulation.ca

Director of community services resigns

By Mark Arike

After five years with the Township of Minden Hills, Rick Cox will officially hang up his hat as the director of community services and recreation manager on Aug. 31.

"I'm excited, I'm sad, I've got mixed feelings," said Cox, who handed in his resignation to the township on Aug. 13. "But overall, I'm extremely grateful to this community and township for treating me so well over the years."

As of Sept. 4, Cox will take up his new position as the director of parks and recreation for Tillsonburg, a town with a population of approximately 15,000 residents. In the job he will oversee a department that is about five times the size of the one he is currently responsible for.

"It's a bigger municipality, it's a bigger job, it's a bigger operation," he said.

Over the past five years, many job opportunities have come across Cox's desk. He applied for this one because the time felt right and so did the fit.

"It's sort of the next step in my career progression," he said, adding that he grew up in London and still has family in the area.

"There are family connections to the area and that makes this a good fit for those reasons."

In his role at the township, Cox has been responsible for managing and directing the overall operations of parks and recreation, including the S.G. Nesbitt Memorial Arena and Minden Community Centre. When he started in April of 2007, the position was newly created.

And since he's been working for a fairly small township with a limited number of resources, Cox has had to juggle many responsibilities – simultaneously.

"I've done everything from moving tables at events to doing work in the cemetery to having strategic conversations at council and with partners. That's the nature of the structure here – you don't have layers of people."

Having said that, Cox is extremely grateful for all he has learned and the people who have been a part of those experiences.

"This community has been very supportive of me and the types of things I've tried to accomplish."

With the help of his staff and the community's volunteers, Cox says many new events and initiatives have been brought to the town.

"We've done a ton of things," he said, citing examples such as the Minden 150 Bike Tour, which is in its fourth year, and recreational programming including baseball, hockey and Zumba.

Cox admits that he will regret not being able to get involved with the 2015 Pan Am Games.

"I am really excited about that. I think it's huge for this community and county."

Cox believes that a strong parks and recreation department is one of the keys to creating a vibrant community.

"What we do makes people want to stay here, play here and want to come back," he said, noting that not every undertaking proves to be a success.

Moving forward, Cox is eager to accept the challenges ahead of him.

"I think I'm ready for it. They obviously feel I'm ready for it."

In a press release, Tillsonburg Mayor John Lessif expressed his delight at the hiring of Cox.

"I am thrilled to have Rick join our organization and be the leader for the next chapter in the evolution of parks and recreation services," said Lessif.

Although Reeve Barb Reid was a bit surprised by the news, she's happy for Cox.

"It's just a fabulous opportunity for him," said Reid, adding that Cox has "done an amazing job for the township under very challenging conditions."

"He's taken leadership roles in all of the Sesquicentennial activities, he's worked very closely with the Riverwalk committee, the boardwalk was something he project-managed..."

Reid said Cox has made "a huge contribution to Minden Hills."

Cox's family has owned property in the Kennisis Lake area for many years. So while he plans on moving to Tillsonburg, he won't completely disappear off the map.

"I'll be in the community on the weekends and am looking forward to participating in the community events as opposed to being the guy running around trying to make them happen," he laughed.

The Computer Guy Good riddance to the iPod

By David Spaxman

This will probably be the last year the iPod means much to anyone. Its last version seems to be the cute little iPod wristwatch lash-up using the nano. However, as the iPod fades, I say good riddance. Its real legacy is that the entire country will now have to put up with a generation of half-deaf Canadians.

Articles repeatedly report that people listen to their iPods at levels that are too loud for the human ear. Yes, the newer iPods have monitors to control the natural tendency to blow out the volume, but it's too late.

Some of us actually worked at industrial companies where ear protection, salt tablets and hard hats were part of the work environment. I was even a drummer in a rock band and I wore ear plugs when I played because of the 500-watt monitor blasting beside me. The idea of ear protection, however, was not drummed into the heads of today's youngsters who commonly hurt their ears by listening to iPods that are too loud.

Often I'm near someone who is listening to an iPod and I can identify the song. I cannot imagine how loud it must be to the actual listener. I've even been near someone blasting music so loudly that I had to tell him to turn it down because I couldn't complete a thought. The guy should have just stuck his head inside a boom box.

The iPod also began the process of separation between people and their environment, which has only grown worse with mobile phones and texting. One could argue that people's fascination with distancing themselves from the surrounding world and immersing themselves in a playlist is not as dangerous as distracted phone chatting or texting, but I wonder.

Yes, people often walk into telephone poles while walking and texting, but at least they are socializing. When plugged into an iPod, listeners completely detach themselves from the immediate reality and zone out.

At the end of the day, it all boils down to the ear buds. These sound injectors should be outlawed. I've never discovered the inventor of the modern ear bud because ear buds actually predate the headphones and earpieces used with non-amplified crystal radios. Adding amplification to the device is simply not healthy for the ears.

I do know that I've already witnessed the invention of the transistor radio, which people used as an early personal entertainment device. This morphed into the very popular boom box, which people often carried around on their shoulders.

The boom box seemed to have disappeared overnight once the MP3 player, introduced by the iPod, appeared.

Well, the iPod fad is not completely over but rather has transformed into a smartphone fad. This should eventually morph into something else again. Let's hope that for the sake of the next generation, it is something that does not destroy our hearing.

Minden bike tour 150 serves up a challenge

By Mark Arike

For the fourth year in a row, cyclists braved Haliburton County's hills for the Minden 150 Bike Tour.

A total of 162 riders pre-registered for the Aug. 11 event, with more than half participating in the 150-kilometre trek. Other rides included a 70-kilometre route and 40 kilometres.

The 40-kilometre option was titled "Penny's Ride" in honour of the late Penny Obee. According to the Minden 150 website, Obee was the founding chair and driving force behind the establishment of the event, which launched in 2009 (the same year the town celebrated its sesquicentennial anniversary). All proceeds from Penny's ride will be donated to the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School Scholarship fund in her memory.

The afternoon included live entertainment by local acts such as Trina West, Albert Saxby and Amelia Edmunds. A meal was provided to cyclists by The Dominion Hotel.

This year, the tour partnered with the Share the Road Cycling Coalition of Canada in an effort to promote safe cycling and help spread the word about cycle tourism in the county.

Wilberforce hosts 29th annual fair

By Matthew Desrosiers

Despite sporadic rainfall, the 29th annual Wilberforce Agricultural Fair was a big success according to event organizers.

"We had a great day," said Carol Lee, member of the agricultural fair board of directors. "People kept coming through the gate."

The two-day fair on Aug. 10 and 11 hosted a number of activities for all ages to enjoy, including a dog show, oxen ride, bouncy castle, geocaching and a high stryker.

Various exhibits were set up on the fairgrounds that allowed visitors to get hands-on. They could get up-close and personal with a variety of farm animals, try their hands at traditional wood-working, and even learn to milk a cow using dummy utters.

Joanne Vanier, fair treasurer, said every year the fair keeps getting bigger and better.

While planning for next year's event will start in September, it is too early to tell what special plans the organizers might have for next year's 30th annual fair.

Fly-in cancelled, but antique cars draw crowd

By Mark Arike

Although there weren't any ultralights taking off the runway, the rest of the festivities at this year's Stanhope Cruise and Fly-In went ahead as planned.

"The weather did not clear out until it was too late, so no one could fly in," said airport manager Duane Hicks, adding that the event averages 40 to 50 airplanes every year.

"They come in droves."

New attractions at the event included radio-controlled plane demonstrations, courtesy of Young's Point Radio Control Model Flying Club. The annual vintage car show drew 70 vehicles while Elvis impersonator Rob Sharpe provided live entertainment.

Through a 50/50 draw, funds were raised for Point In Time and Haliburton Highlands Health Services.

"It was great having everyone there," said Hicks.

Admission was free and all costs were covered by the Township of Algonquin Highlands.

SO YOU THINK YOU CAN RECYCLE

TAKE THE RECYCLING CHALLENGE!

TRUE OR FALSE?

Paper towel, facial tissue, and napkins or serviettes are not recyclable and should be disposed of in the garbage.

Answer: True. Tissue, paper towel and napkins are all considered personal hygiene or clean-up products. Due to potential contamination, these products are not accepted for recycling. In Algonquin Highlands these items should go in your household garbage. (In other communities with composting programs, these items might be accepted in the green bin. Check with your local municipality.)

HELP WANTED

VOLUNTEER LEADERS NEEDED

For the 1st Minden Scouts, Beaver and Cub sections. We are trying to provide a programme for 2012/2013 from September to June. To do this we need at least four leaders. Two for each section. Training is provided by Scouts Canada Whitepine Region and guidance is provided by the group commissioner and treasurer. Registration of leaders is paid by the group. The goals of Scouting are varied and evolve as the child works their way through the sections. Beavers aged 5 to 7 are taught to share and play and work well with others. Cubs aged 8 to 11 are introduced to the outdoors, camping, and the skills that are required for survival in this environment. The programme is provided by Scouts Canada to meet these goals.

If you are interested please contact the undersigned. A police check and volunteer screening process is a requirement for all Scout Leaders.
